VIOLENCE FREE RELATIONSHIPS

Healthy relationships are distinguished by assertive communication to solve disagreements; based on trust and respect; and recognized by the value of freedom and independence of each partner.

If your relationship misaligns from this, pay attention and seek help. There are public policies that protect victims of partner violence.

The Title IX law prohibits sex or gender discrimination in all forms, including partner violence, at educational institutions.

If you are a victim or you are aware of a situation of sex discrimination on campus, you can file a complaint at our office!
